In this post we do some preliminary experiments to investigate the behavior of the Hamiltonian Monte Carlo algorithm (HMC) for statistical inference on neural networks. In particular, we demonstrate using synthetic data that HMC converges faster than Langevin dynamics. More precisely, the HMC algorithm samples from a multivariate normal distribution with diagonal covariance and mean equal to the expectation of the gradient (described as the momentum vector). The algorithm uses momentum values defined by a momentum scaling factor  $\gamma$ . The scaling factor  $\gamma$  is usually tuned manually to ensure good mixing properties of the algorithm, but in this work we demonstrate that, given an estimate of the gradient,  $\gamma$  can be computed automatically and accelerated by a factor of 1.8. For Langevin dynamics, we also demonstrate a simple automatic tuning strategy for the time-scale of the evolution by adapting the time-step of the integrator. The scaling factor  $\gamma$  of the HMC algorithm can also be computed automatically, but this time it is faster, a factor of 1.2, to adapt the HMC momentum evolution time-scale compared to Langevin dynamics. This work is published in IEEE Transactions on Neural Networks and Learning Systems (TNNLS), vol. 25, no. 10, October 2014, pp. 4257-4267, .Legalising cannabis will benefit all party, says Arlene Foster Arlene Foster has said that legalising cannabis would benefit everyone in Northern Ireland. The Democratic Unionist Party leader is strongly in favour of legalising cannabis, as have many others. Her comments were made at the party's conference in Lisburn. She said: "It would be beneficial because of the treatment for medical use, and also the effect on public health and on the young people." Her sentiments come after her party, and Theresa May's Conservative government are in negotiations to form a new government. The DUP and the Conservatives were in discussions until almost midnight last night, before May lost her Commons majority when the LibDems voted tactically

I am expecting 3 'yes' and 2 'no' while the output of the published script has zero. I expected the evaluation script to return 3,3,3,3,2,2,2,2 and 1,1,1,0,0,0,0 as output. I should also mention that the published script returns these values without using return and outside the loop.
