There are two worlds: the real world and the virtual world. Between the two worlds lie portals which connect them together. Some portals exist to connect worlds together. Others exist as a form of transport to/from worlds. Some portals are portals for different types of travel. Some are rare and spectacular. Some can have many portals while others can only have one. The player character at the center of both worlds is a carefree boy who is bored, tired of his work, looking for something to do and has the potential to be a portal explorer. This is the story and premise of whateverland: Prologue. As the story unfolds, you will discover what the boy has been doing between worlds and how he got to the current state that he is in. The premise of this game is similar to other popular cloud game servers, such as PUBG. Initially it was called 3 Days. The decision to make the title was guided by various factors from the project page and then the early access which should be a very long-lasting project. After the early access has started to release, we have gathered the very first feedback and knowledge. The early days were mainly about getting the feature list down and working out the basics of the user interface. The game has been in a pre-alpha state for a year now. It's still growing, taking in feedback and refining as we go. The game is being developed by Tony, a developer with nearly 10 years of programming experience. He created the game using the Unity game engine. Most of the code is written by Tony and a small group of contractors. Additional Credits: Tony M. (Tony from Whateverland) Kevon Yu (Project manager/Lead Programmer) Andy Thomas (Coder) Jesus Soto (2D Coder) Milos Hadzic (UI Artist, Lead Designer) A: Careful with your timekeeping. It's very easy to accidentally click out of the game and miss important things. I did a little research and found that your first screenshot is actually from a version of the game that was released for iOS earlier this year. So... there's nothing really wrong with this game, per se. However, there are a few things you need to know: Your game might be called 3D Connect due to an old trademark issue The final game is being released for PC and mobile platforms If you're making a 3D

This is a casual game where you control a black circle. Your task is to collect pink squares that appear on the screen in a random place. The difficulty of the game lies in the fact that red objects appear on the screen, from contact with which the circle breaks and you have to start the game again. The game is actively using physics, so keep this in mind when you need to dodge a red object attack. And how many pink squares can you collect? This is a casual game where you control a black circle.
