Announced each December, these lists acknowledge all the music we've heard, seen, or experienced in the last year. If you're new to it, Pitchfork's year-end list is a great way to discover music you may have missed in 2019. These are the records we listened to most on record players, listen to while falling asleep, or put on repeat at coffee shops. Each list features both the best album and song of the year, as well as breakdowns and releases. They're all ranked and we break down why each album and song is so great. This list will be updated every year and will cover at least 10 albums and 20 songs in 2019. We also highlight several albums that are receiving additional attention on other lists, such as The Best New Music and Best Streaming Music. If you're interested in music right now, don't miss out on some of the best music of the year. Also, don't forget to check out the Pitchfork Album Of The Year! 50.
