Raceways DM's Guild The PC's have come to Blackstone, seeking the lost ancient weapons of the last Varagrim. In the tunnels below the city, rumors abound that the first elements of what will be a massive Underdark obstacle course have appeared. An underground raceway complex was uncovered near Blackstone's west gate but the rangers who entered it didn't come out, but died. Now a local patrol of duergar has discovered a secret tunnel leading to the "raceway." They have sent word of the intruders to Mabel, who fears that a rival syndicate is trying to put up a raceway and steal the duergar's investment. She has sent some of her rangers to investigate and hopefully bring back one of the lost weapons of the first Varagrim. Does Mabel have what it takes to run a high-stakes underground race and save the duergar from a great misfortune? Blackstone's Luck The stalwart fort-city of Blackstone has warded its magical territory well from the meddling of the Wyrms and her minions. The metropolis has stood against the resurgence of great monsters since the battle against the giant crustacean monsters, the Avinin, nearly twenty years ago. But all monies spent on this endeavour have been exhausted; Blackstone's defense is woefully inadequate and the city is almost wholly dependent upon the wealth and commerce generated from the west gates. The citizens are uneasy. They must put up with an influx of monster-leaguers from the wilderness, gather to brave the dangers of the mail route, and deal with the direct effects of an ancient curse. No wonder that for the many who live in the fort, the spectre of the krotasaur is ever present, a seemingly unreasonable fear given the steady stream of adventurers and guardsmen streaming through their gates. Of all these inconveniences and dangers, the greatest has been the upheaval in the status quo. The dwarves have returned to the north and raided the gold mines of Hepzibah. Many of the mines have been returned to their proper owners, but many have been stolen. The dwarves have provided no compensation for the equipment or lives lost during the raids, and most of the equipment and lives of the elves have been stolen. The elves have demanded compensation and retribution, but have been granted none. For all these losses, the dwarves have gained a great deal of wealth and prestige

What's new in Your Principal:

for one reason..It is terrific! It does everything you could want in an amplifier/amplifier/amplifier-cigar combo. There is very little noise (still quite a bit, but it is not the gravelly road noise of the older models), and there are lots of clean watts. The treble comes in handy for vocals, while the bass can be enjoyed under any circumstances. I found a wood chair to use as a back rest while I listened to my favorite tunes and smoked casually through the night. I have done extensive research and written fanboy-rhapsodies on the latest and most satisfying century of my life. Of all my purchases this has surpassed them all. For the first time, I actually love this product. I finally get a "just right" system for a reasonable price and an amazing soundstage. Since the early 80's, I have desired "real" sound. Now, I finally have it for an affordable price. I went to Guitar Center's web site to log in, just to see if the system was listed, and it wasn't. The preamp and the Marantz CD player/receiver are wired directly back to the Fritz for convenience. It is all controlled via the Twist 'n Tune electric piano remote control. There is a remote control for the Stereo System Dimension ATS-100 speakers. I added it, because they had been very, very poor, and needed one. First, is the soundstage. When I started back in the mid 90's, I would go to a large hall to hear pro-act musicians play. This enabled me to hear the bass and treble, and the rhythm, but there was minimal soundstage. Maybe 2 o'clock. I am in paradise now. I can hear everything in the song, with minimal soundstage, but I can tell what the music is composed of. It is the best. I can not find a system to measure up to it. The soundstage I can hear takes me back to the older days of listening. Anyhow, it sounds best on frequencies that humans listen to, from 19 Hz to 24 kHz. These are the natural frequencies for the human ear. Yes, there are some frequencies far outside of this range, but it does not matter, because the sound that anyone human is aware of is centered on the 19 - 24 kHz range, with some fine tuning for the middle range. I have tried many
